Chicago, December 9, 2020—The Graham Foundation announces support to 36 international organizations leading projects that respond to today’s challenges, foster new connections across disciplines, and expand the field of architecture. The projects include exhibitions—ranging from new commissioned works to retrospectives of under recognized figures—in Istanbul, London, New Orleans, Philadelphia, and Chicago, where the Graham Foundation is based. New editorial projects and forthcoming publications also include student-led journals and inventive programs to support critics in residencies and global correspondents writing about the city, by publishers and institutions based in San Francisco, Paris, Mexico City, Montreal, Los Angeles, Prague, Salt Lake City, and Singapore. Together, these organizations support the work of eminent and emerging architects, artists, designers, critics, curators, scholars, and others, to explore new possibilities for the field and engage practitioners and publics worldwide.

The new grantees join a global network of individuals and institutions that the Graham Foundation has supported through the award of more than $40.3 million for 4,730 grants over the past 64 years.
